

It's time for a health care system that works.

Patients should have access to health care when we need it, not just when we can afford it.

Health outcomes should never be determined by race, class, or immigration status.

Our system should serve patients first and should be accountable to us.

That's why hundreds of Washingtonians are coming together to call on our state to affirm that Health Care Is a Human Right. We're taking action in our communities and in Olympia to call for a health care system that works for everyone.

"As a nurse I want to care for people who are sick and help people improve their health. I can't think of anyone, no single human being, who does not deserve to be cared for when they are sick or injured. I want a health care system that recognizes health care as a human right where no one is excluded and there are no cost barriers. I see it like the fire department, a public responsibility. If there is a fire... they come and put the fire out, no matter what. If you are sick, we take care of you, no matter what. Very simple: Healthcare is a human right not a commodity."

Vicki Neumeier, RN, Seattle

"The outrageous cost of the medical care landed me in collections. As a woman who is unable to work because of my medical conditions, there is absolutely no way I will ever be able to pay off my debt. I am so afraid of gaining more debt that I skip checkups and important prescriptions."

Rose Price, Patient and Community Member, Tacoma
